Mr. Roberto Zanetta

The origins of the property date back to 1872, when the merchant Edoardo Horst built a private lakeside residence. In 1886, the estate passed to Giacomo della Torre, who dedicated it to his daughter Aminta, from whom it still takes its name today. Aminta and her husband, Admiral Francesco Capece, lived there until 1939, preserving its identity and original spirit.

From 1950 onward, the property entered a new chapter in its history, transforming into an elegant hotel and becoming a renowned destination for travelers, artists, and distinguished guests drawn by the timeless charm of the Belle Époque. In 1966, it also welcomed Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, who chose this retreat for one of their most iconic escapes, further enhancing its legendary reputation.

Thanks to the meticulous restoration undertaken by the Zanetta family since the early 2000s, the property has been returned to its former glory, combining historic charm with contemporary comforts.

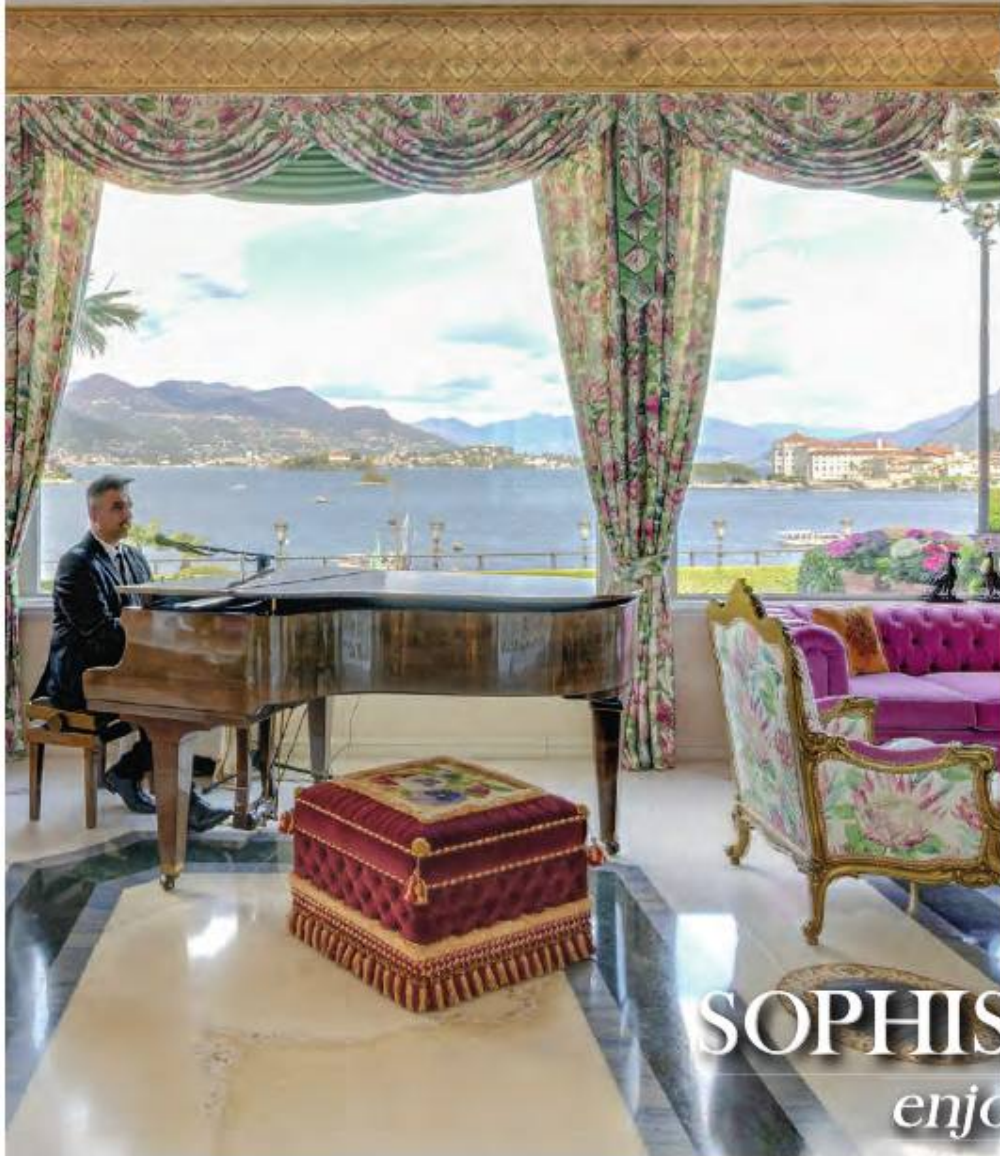

Today, Villa and Palazzo Aminta retain their warm, family spirit, offering an authentic experience where history, elegance, and hospitality blend together in a unique and unforgettable atmosphere.
